In the fall of 2005, with the support of the US National Science Foundation, the activities of Global Memory Net was greatly expanded to include a strong "global community building" component. As a result, seven visiting researchers from China, Croatia and Vietnam were able to spend from three- to five-month each in working with the research team under the guidance of Prof. Ching-chih Chen in Boston.

This paper describes some of the first author's experience of his work during this period, and presents specifically the collection of the Museum of Slavonia in Osijek on Global Memory Net with all the features and capabilities as described in Chen's paper.
